

I am an apostrophe. You show, perhaps, that someone has shouted.	I am an exclamation mark! You can be used before a list.	I am a colon. You are a word like I, you, she, it, we, they or us (words that do not often come after a comma).
I am a pronoun. You are a person, place or thing.	I am a noun. You are a word that describes a noun.	I am an adjective. You are found on either end of something that is spoken.
"I am a speech mark." (I can never be alone!) You describe how something is done.	I am an adverb. You can separate items in a list.	I am a comma. You end a sentence even when part of an exclamation or question mark.
I am a full stop. You are used for words that are places or names, or that start a sentence.	I am a capital letter. You can avoid a splice or comma splice with me.	I am a semi colon. You are the name given to a, an and the.

I am an article. You are the letters a, e i, o and u.	I am the vowels. You are all the other letters.	I am consonants. You separate different events, times or speech in writing.
I am a paragraph. You are words that sound the same at the end.	I am rhyme. You are words that start with the same sound. E.g. The final fight finished the feud.	I am alliteration. You are a phrase that compares one thing to another. E.g. as wise as an owl.
I am a simile. You describe different objects as being the same. E.g. The grass was an emerald blanket.	I am a metaphor. You make objects sound like humans. E.g. The streetlights leaned over to look at the cars' white eyes.	I am personification. You show belonging. E.g. the dog's bone.
I am a possessive apostrophe. I can join two sentences together to make a compound sentence. E.g. and, but, although, because, since.	I am a conjunction. You show that time has passed. E.g. Later that day, earlier on.	I am a time connective. You can start a sentence to lead onto another idea. E.g. Consequently, Furthermore, However.

I am a connective. You use words like: no-one can deny, few may dispute that, it is a fact that, many critics cite that, it is my opinion that, despite.	I am language of debate. You can be used in place of commas or brackets to create a more complex sentence.	I am dashes. You are a style of writing that often uses bullet points.
I am instructions. You are a style that has the name of the speaker on the left and no speech marks.	I am a play script. You are a style that begins with Dear and ends with Yours.	I am a letter. You are a style that has paragraphs like so: introduction, main person, quotes from them, other people and quotes and a conclusion.
I am a journalistic report. You are a word that must not be used in writing, beginning with 'g'.	I am 'got'. You are a word that must not be used in writing, beginning with 'n'.	I am 'nice'. You are the name given to an -'ing' word at the start of sentence that can create a complex sentence.
I am a present participle. You can be used when letters are missed out. E.g. can't, won't, isn't, couldn't.		